FUND MANAGER COMMENTARY

The major theme persisting in March has been Russia’s invasion of Ukraine. Russia and Ukraine constitute a small share of global GDP and thus recessions in both countries are unlikely to have a direct impact on global growth. However, the indirect impact of rising resource prices is more significant. This has caused a dampening in global economic growth prospects and has exacerbated expectations of supply-driven inflation.

Rising inflation has kept real (inflation-adjusted) yields near record lows, even as nominal yields have risen sharply. The narrowing of the spread between the two- and 10-year US Treasury yields has brought concerns around an inverted yield curve, wherein short-term rates are higher than long-term rates. These inversions have historically preceded a period of slowing economic growth and, in many cases, a recession.

However, despite the flatter yield curve, riskier asset classes rallied in late March, with the S&P 500 and Nasdaq rising by 3.7% and 4.2% respectively for the month. However, after seven straight quarterly increases, the S&P 500 lost c. 4.6% in the first quarter of this year with only the energy sector being a clear winner.

Collective Investments are traded at ruling prices and can engage in borrowing and scrip lending, however IFM does not currently engage in script lending. A schedule of fees, charges and maximum commissions is available on request. IFM reserves the right to close the portfolio to new investors and reopen certain portfolios from time to time in order to manage them more efficiently in accordance with its mandate. Performance figures quoted for the portfolio are from Morningstar and the Fund Administrator, as at the date of this document for a lump sum investment, using NAV-NAV with income reinvested and do not take any upfront manager’s charge into account. Income distributions are declared on the ex-dividend date and may be subject to mandatory withholding taxes. Actual investment performance will differ based on the initial fee charge applicable, the actual investment date, the date of reinvestment and dividend withholding tax. This fund may invest into other Collective Investment Schemes, which may levy their own charges, which could result in a higher fee structure for these portfolios.
