FUND MANAGER COMMENTARY

September was another challenging month for investors with the primary culprit being the slew of global central bank meetings which generally underlined the prospect of higher-for-longer interest rates with lacklustre economic growth.

Whether coincidence or not, the “September Effect” played out as stock markets around the globe slumped with the MSCI ACWI Index ending the month down 4.1%. In the US, the more-hawkish Federal Reserve, surging crude oil prices and fears of increased supply of government debt drove the value of the US dollar and Treasury market yields higher, which was not good news for equities. As a result, the S&P 500 ended the month down 4.8% while the NASDAQ 100 fared even worse, ending down 5.0%. The Euro STOXX 50 held up slightly better but still declined by 2.8% while the FTSE 100 regained some of its yearly losses ending the month up by 2.4%.

Locally, the South African Reserve Bank (SARB) kept the repo rate unchanged at 8.25%. However, the SARB reiterated that the recent currency devaluation and the spike in global oil prices remain a notable risk to the short-to medium-term inflation trajectory and as such, they have cautioned that the bank may need to tighten policy rates further if the economic data suggests it. As such, local markets were not immune to the global equity sell off with the FTSE/JSE All Share Index declining by 2.5%.
